v.

ORDER OF JOINDER

JONATHAN BARR
LAW LIBRARY

FRANK LAPOMARDA

JAN 30 2008

This matter came before the court on the State's request to join the above cases for a single trial pursuant to M.R.Crim.P. 8(c). The defendant object to the State's request except as follows. The parties have stipulated that the following cases may be joined: (1) CR-07-1110 and CR-07-1199 may be joined for a single trial and (2) Counts Two, Three and Four of CR-07-1846 may be joined for a single trial.

Lapomarda is charged as follows:

CR-07-1110, Counts 1 and 2, Gross Sexual Assault of Rhoda Crocker on April 15, 2007

CR-07-1199, Count 1, Tampering with a Victim, Rhonda Crocker, on May 9, 2007

Count 2, Violating a Condition of Release on May 9, 2007

CR-07-1846, Count 1, Gross Sexual Assault of Rose LaBarr on April 22, 2002

Count 2, Unlawful Sexual Contact of Rhea Zecchino on January 6, 2007

Count 3, Harassment by Telephone of Rhea Zecchino on January 21, 2007

Count 4, Theft of house keys from Rhea Zecchino on January 21, 2007

CR-07-2162, Count 1, Aggravated Assault of Charlene Rideout on July 27, 2005

Pursuant to M.R.Crim.P. 8(c), the court may order "two or more indictments . . . to be tried together against a single defendant if the crimes should have been joined under paragraph (a)." Paragraph 8(a) provides for the joinder of two or more crimes "if crimes charged, whether of the same class or different classes, are of the same or similar character or are based on the same act or transaction or on two or more acts or transactions which are connected or which constitutes part of a common scheme or plan.” If the crimes “are connected in any reasonable manner, they are properly joinable.” State v. Pierce, 2001 ME 14, ¶ 13, 770 A.2d 630 (quotation marks and citation omitted). The test in determining whether there is a common scheme or plan is whether the events in each charge alleged are connected “in time, purpose and modus operandi.” Id. at ¶ 16 (quotation marks and citation omitted).

The defendant is charged with crimes of a similar character that are connected by a common scheme or plan. Although there are differences in the details in which the crimes were carried out, the overall purpose and modus operandi are similar. None of the crimes are alleged to have occurred in exactly the same way because it is alleged that the defendant adapted his method to get each victim to where he wanted her and his method varied with the victim’s degree of resistance, but in all other ways, the alleged crimes are strikingly similar. They are connected in purpose and modus operandi.

In the first incident, it is alleged he pulled his car up to the sidewalk on High Street, near the Eastland Hotel, where Ms. LaBarr was walking and motioned her over to his car. He took her to Denny’s for a meal, then told her he was redecorating his house and asked her advice getting her to his home, he suggested she stay in one of his bedrooms, and before the attack when she came out of the bathroom, the defendant was wearing only a pajama top and his genitals were exposed. Shortly after she went to bed, he entered the room where she was sleeping and sexually assaulted her twice.

In the second incident, it is alleged that he met Ms. Rideout while he was in his car and she was on Congress Street near her home on Congress Street. He was to take her to a bar in the Morrill's Corner neighborhood but on the way suggested that they go to his house because it was cheaper. Before the sexual attack, the defendant went to his bedroom and emerged wearing boxer shorts with his genitals protruding. When Ms. Rideout resisted his advance, the defendant broke her ankle.

In the third incident, it is alleged that the defendant met Ms. Zecchino on Dyer Street near Dyer's Market when the defendant approached her. The defendant took Ms. Zecchino to Old Country Buffet for a meal. While at the restaurant, she realized that her keys were missing. The defendant told Ms. Zecchino that she could stay at his house since she had no way of getting into her own house. (The lost keys were later found in defendant's trousers when he was found outside of her home.) When she fell asleep on the couch, he suggested she go into one of the bedrooms to sleep but would not let her take her dog into the bedroom. She awoke to find him trying to sexually assault her and managed to escape into his living room.

And, in the final incident, he drove his car up to the Preble Street Shelter and engaged Ms. Crocker in conversation. The defendant took Ms. Crocker to Old Country Buffet for a meal and then took her to Wal-Mart and then drove her around for hours showing her locations important in his life until he told her it was too late to return to the shelter and she could stay at his house. At his house, he offered her a bedroom to sleep in, and several hours after she went to bed, he entered the bedroom where she was, and when she resisted his sexual overtures, he grabbed her arm and injected a needle into it and then proceeded to sexually assault her.

The ways in which the defendant insinuated himself into their lives and got them to his house are clearly similar. In each of the cases, he met the victims on the street, whether at a homeless shelter, on the sidewalk or in the vicinity of a local convenience store. On the night of each of the assaults, he took the victim to first to a restaurant or bar and then to his home where the sexual assault occurred. In the case of Rhonda Crocker and Rhea Zecchino, he took them first to a restaurant followed by a trip to Wal-Mart to get nightclothes for each of the women. He used or engineered excuses to get the victims to his house and once there assaulted them. Where there are a great number of similarities that create a pattern, as here, joinder is appropriate. "That all parts of the State's 'common scheme or plan' were not present in every incident does not mean that the 'common scheme or plan' did not exist." State v. Pierce, 2001 ME 14, ¶ 12, 770 A.2d 63, 634.

Joinder of these crimes will conserve judicial resources, avoid duplicative trials, minimize the public expenditure of funds and provides the defendant with a prompt resolution of the charges. The trial judge, with proper instructions, can assist the jury in treating the evidence relevant to each crime separately and distinctly.

ORDER ON RECONSIDERATION
OF JOINDER

FRANK LAPOMARDA

This matter comes back before the court on the defendant's motion for reconsideration of the order of joinder dated January 4, 2008. New counsel, Clifford Strike, Esquire, now represents defendant. Meg Elam, ADA, continues to represent the State. Since the court's previous order of joinder, the State has indicted the defendant on additional charges, including in Count I Gross Sexual Assault of Rose LeBarr on April 22, 2002, and in Counts II and III Gross Sexual Assault of Rhonda Crocker on April 15, 2007. See Docket No. CR-08-590. The State previously indicted defendant of another Gross Sexual Assault of Rose LeBarr on April 22, 2002 in Docket No. CR-07-1846 and of Rhonda Crocker on April 15, 2007 in Docket No. CR-07-1110. The State filed a Notice of Joinder in Docket No. CR-08-590 on March 5, 2008. Defendant objects to joinder of the cases involving different victims and asks for reconsideration of the January 4, 2008 Order of Joinder entered in the earlier cases.

In the January 4, 2008 Order of Joinder the court found a great number of similarities that created a pattern sufficient to support joinder. The State argues that nothing has changed and all of the same arguments are being made. True, prejudice was raised by defendant's prior attorney. However, the defendant has argued more specifically in his motion for reconsideration.

To support his first argument, defendant cites 1 Cluchey and Seitzinger, Maine Criminal Practice, § 8.10, at III-67 (1992), for the proposition that when joinder occurs "solely on the basis that they are all of the same or similar character, the advantages secured by joinder are not at all clear and it has been suggested that when that is the basis of joinder, a defendant should be entitled to severance as a matter of right." Defendant argues because of the number of charges¹, there is a risk that the jury would convict him because he is a "bad man" for which there is no curative instruction. Defendant also argues that there is a serious and substantial risk that the jury would improperly attribute evidence on one of the charges to the other charges involving a different victim. Having reconsidered the facts² in these cases, the court agrees with some of defendant's contentions.

For example, the case involving Rhonda Crocker may be the strongest case with substantial physical and corroborating evidence. Ms. Crocker alleges that the defendant sexually assaulted her on April 15, 2007 after first approaching her on Preble Street, then taking her to dinner to Old Country Buffet, shopping at Wal-Mart, driving her around and

CR-07-1110, Counts 1 and 2, Gross Sexual Assault of Rhoda Crocker on April 15, 2007;

CR-07-1199, Count 1, Tampering with a Victim, Rhonda Crocker, on May 9, 2007,

Count 2, Violating a Condition of Release on May 9, 2007;

CR-07-1846, Count 1, Gross Sexual Assault of Rose LeBarr on April 22, 2002,

Count 2, Unlawful Sexual Contact of Rhea Zecchino on January 6, 2007,

Count 3, Harassment by Telephone of Rhea Zecchino on January 21, 2007,

Count 4, Theft of house keys from Rhea Zecchino on January 21, 2007;

CR-07-2162, Count 1, Aggravated Assault of Charlene Rideout on July 27, 2005;

CR-08-590, Count 1, Gross Sexual Assault of Rose LeBarr on April 22, 2002,

Counts 2 and 3, Gross Sexual Assault of Rhonda Crocker on April 15, 2007.

² For the purposes of this motion the facts were not contested.

going back to his house because it was, according to defendant, now too late to return her to the shelter which would be closed. Defendant offered Ms. Crocker his bedroom and later he entered the bedroom without knocking or obtaining her consent. While she pretended to be asleep, he attempted to sexually assault her. When Ms. Crocker resisted, defendant grabbed her arm, injected a needle into it, told her to stop resisting and sexually assaulted her. Defendant told her he “owned” the Portland Police, and when she asked him to call a cab, he told her he had. Ms. Crocker stayed there until 6:30 p.m. the next day when she finally went to his next-door neighbors and asked them to assist her in calling a cab. Ms. Crocker then went to the Hospital and subsequently reported the crime to the police. Ms. Crocker also alleges that she received repeated phone calls from the defendant within days after the assault. In her case, there is DNA evidence, medical documentation of an assault, a photo identification, corroborating witnesses, a videotape of the defendant with his victim at Wal-Mart on the night of the assault and phone records.

In the case involving Rose LeBarr, there are far fewer similarities and no physical or corroborating evidence, hence increasing the likelihood of a verdict based on propensity evidence. She alleges that on April 22, 2002, the defendant called her over to his car on High Street, took her to Denny’s for dinner and then took her back to his place after asking her for advice on how to redecorate his house. While at defendant’s home, Ms. LeBarr used the bathroom. When she came out of the bathroom, the defendant was undressed from the waist down. She rebuffed this advance, but agreed to stay there that night because she did not know where she was in Portland. Ms. LeBarr alleges that shortly after she went to bed, the defendant entered the bedroom without knocking or asking permission and sexually assaulter her. Although she saw several phones in defendant's home, she did not call 911 because she saw they were wired strangely and thought defendant might be monitoring them. The defendant eventually drove her home. Ultimately, she reported the crime to the police, but there is no physical evidence and the initial charge was dismissed for insufficient evidence of compulsion. Even though no new evidence has been found and the crimes occurred 5 years apart, with joinder the State will be permitted to go forward in her case, joined with a case that presents a similar fact pattern but with greater physical evidence.

Defendant argues that this same analysis may be made to the charges involving Charlene Rideout, where the original complaint was dismissed due to lack of credibility of the victim's account, but will now be presented with a case with a similar factual pattern but with greater evidence. Ms. Rideout alleges that she also met the a man on Congress Street and they were to go to a bar but that on the way, the man suggested that they go to his house because he had whiskey there and it would be cheaper than going to a bar. So, on July 27, 2005, a man named "Tony" and she were drinking at his house and she asked to stay at his house for a couple of days. The defendant propositioned her for sex but he did not want to pay for it. The man emerged from his bedroom with boxer shorts on and his genitals protruding. She rebuffed his advance. According to the Police Report, she was confused while speaking with the police, indicating that she was being chased by witches and could not give a description of "Tony". Ms. Rideout first alleged he grabbed her ankle and broke her foot; yet, she alleged two years later that after "Tony" exposed his genitals to her, she wanted to leave but he hit her ankle with a baseball bat. At this time, she was also able to identify defendant from a photo lineup as the man she knew as “Tony”. In the earlier investigation, the police focused on her boyfriend, Anthony Hawkins, with whom she had a history of domestic violence. However, after the initial report, she refused to cooperate and the case was inactivated for two years until she was reinterviewed and told the police the different story. Even though no new physical evidence has been found and the crimes occurred 2 years apart, with joinder the State will be permitted to go forward in her case, joined with a case that presents a similar fact pattern but with greater physical evidence.

The case involving Rhea Zecchino is far closer in plan to the case involving Rhonda Crocker. Ms. Zecchino alleges that on January 6, 2007, the defendant approached her on Portland Street, took her to Old County Buffet and after she was unable to locate her keys and at defendant’s suggestion, she went back to stay with defendant at his house because she had been locked out of her house. At defendant’s suggestion, she went to sleep in defendant’s bedroom although he would not let her take her dog with her into the bedroom. She alleges that at 4:30 a.m., when she was asleep, the defendant entered the bedroom, without knocking or asking permission, and touched her vagina with his hand but did not penetrate her because she jumped out of bed as soon as this occurred. She threatened to call the cops and the defendant then left her alone. She called a friend who later picked her up. Ms. Zecchino alleges the defendant called her on January 21, 2007 and told her he was outside her home watching her. She called the police who responded and found defendant outside her house with Ms. Zecchino’s house keys in defendant’s pant pocket. Ms. Zecchino provided the police with a copy of messages left by the defendant on her answering machine.

In short, the prejudice to defendant, the defendant argues, is that a victim has come forward with a more credible account with physical evidence, making the older, less credible cases suddenly more credible solely because of some similarities in the cases. Defendant also argues that prejudice will occur because the defendant will have to testify as to all or none, violating his 5th Amendment Rights, even though he may wish to testify in some charges but not on others.

The court agrees with much of defendant's analysis. On reconsideration, the court concludes that there is a great likelihood that a jury will use the physical evidence obtained in the Rhonda Crocker and the Rhea Zecchino cases to convict defendant of the other charges where there is no physical evidence, but some similarities in the plan or scheme. It will be difficult for the jury to separate the evidence and use the evidence only in permissible ways with respect to each victim. The defendant does not object to the joinder of charges involving the same victim.

Accordingly, CR-07-1110 and CR-07-1199, Counts II, III and IV in CR-07-1846 and Counts II and III in CR-08-590 may be joined together. Defendant met these two victims on the street in 2007, took each to Old Country Buffet before taking each to his home, used or engineered excuses for not taking them to their homes, offered his bedroom to each, entered the bedroom without knocking or asking permission, sexually assaulted or attempted to sexually assault each while sleeping, interfered with each victim's ability to call the police by scaring them so they remained in his house for several hours, and telephoned his victims after the sexual assaults. The other cases will be tried separately. Although there are some similarities in the other cases, the similarities are far fewer and occurred in a different time period. There also is no physical evidence in these other cases and thus a greater risk that the jury would improperly attribute evidence on one of the charges to the other charges involving a different victim. Joining all the cases together would emphasize the propensity aspect of this evidence and deprive defendant of the opportunity to exercise his Fifth Amendment Rights.

2. Count I in CR-07-1846 and Count I in CR-08-590 are hereby joined with each other but with no cases involving different victims; and
3. CR-07-2162 shall be tried separately.
